

Contents

Acknowledgments

Introduction	10
I. Abandoning Rationalist IR Theory	31
Destabilising the Subject/Object Domain	34
Dissolving the Dualism between Structure and Action	40
Towards a View of International Relations as Practice	54
II. International Society and the Making of International Order	67
International Society	70
Practice	77
Formation	84
Constitution	96
III. Sovereignty and the Constitution of International Society	105
Sovereignty – Theory and Practice	108
Sovereignty and History	113
The Early Modern Period – Dynasticism	114
The High Modern Period – Liberalism and Nationalism	118
The Late Modern Period – Neoliberalism	124
The Constitutive Role of Sovereignty	131

IV. The Making of a Status-Order	139
Towards a Concept of Status	140
The Making of a Status-Order	153
Stratification	153
Actualisation	165
V. From Status to Contract	177
VI. The Making of a Contract-Order	187
Towards a Concept of Contract	189
The Making of a Contract-Order	201
Constitution	202
Cooperation	213
Competition	224
Summary	238
Bibliography	247