

Table of Content

Abbreviations	11
List of Figures	17
List of Tables	19
List of Boxes	20
1. Introduction	21
2. Theoretical Framework of the “ICT for Development Debate”	27
2.1. Definitions and Context	27
2.2. Making ICT Work for Development	34
2.2.1. Putting ICT on the Development Agenda	35
2.2.2. The Digital Divide	40
2.3. Toward an ICT for Development Strategy	43
2.3.1. The Private Sector-led Development Paradigm	45
2.3.2. Linking ICT Promotion with Private Sector-led Development Approaches	47
3. Development and State of ICT in Africa	53
3.1. Origins of Reform	54
3.2. Measuring ICT	59
3.3. Regulation	61
3.4. Fixed-line Developments	69
3.5. Mobile Cellular Developments	75
3.6. Internet Developments	84
3.7. Concluding Remarks	88
4. The Case of Tanzania: Creating an Environment for ICT – Policy, Regulation, Markets and Education	91
4.1. The First Phase until 1993: Recognition	93
4.1.1. Telecom until 1993	93
4.1.2. Early Informatics	97
4.1.2.1. Banning Computers from the Country	98
4.1.2.2. The Impact of the Ban	99
4.1.2.3. The Arrival of Email Service Provision	103
4.1.2.4. Informatics Education	106
4.1.2.5. Concluding Early Informatics	109
4.2. The Second Phase 1994 - 1999: Orientation	110

4.2.1.	Background and Legal Basis of Telecommunications Sector Reform	110
4.2.2.	The Telecommunication Restructuring Programme (TRP) (1993-2000)	112
4.2.2.1.	Donors and Commitment	113
4.2.2.2.	Objectives and Project Components	113
4.2.2.3.	TRP Results	117
4.2.3.	Tackling policies	117
4.2.3.1.	Drawing the Bow: The General Policy Framework	117
4.2.3.2.	The Role of the Ministry of Transport and Communication (MoCT)	121
4.2.3.3.	The National Telecommunication Policy	122
4.2.4.	Building Regulatory Capacity: The Creation of Tanzania Telecommunication Commission (TCC)	124
4.2.5.	The Story of TTCL Part I: The Road to Privatisation	132
4.2.6.	Market Developments between 1994 and 1999	135
4.2.6.1.	Fixed and Basic Services	135
4.2.6.2.	Mobile Services	138
4.2.6.3.	Data Communication Services	140
4.2.6.4.	Internet Service Provision	143
4.2.6.5.	Payphone Services	146
4.2.6.6.	Public Radio-Paging Services	147
4.2.6.7.	Telecommunication Contractors	147
4.2.7.	Human Resource Development: The State of ICT Education	147
4.2.8.	Concluding the Second Phase	150
4.3.	The Third Phase since 2000: Departure	151
4.3.1.	Keeping the Profile: Continued Efforts of Reform	152
4.3.2.	A Catalyst for ICT: the eThinktank	155
4.3.2.1.	The MoCT and the ICT Policy	158
4.3.2.2.	Contextualising the Policy: Government Footprints in Support of ICT	165
4.3.3.	Readjusting Regulation	169
4.3.3.1.	Merging Regulatory Competencies: the Creation of the Tanzania Communication Regulatory Authority – TCRA	170
4.3.3.2.	Licensing	173
4.3.3.3.	Radio Frequency Spectrum Management	178
4.3.3.4.	Interconnection	181
4.3.3.5.	Universal Access	187
4.3.3.6.	Concluding Remarks on TCRA	193
4.3.4.	The Story of TTCL Part II: The Disputed Privatisation	194
4.3.5.	Market Developments since 2000	199
4.3.5.1.	Fixed-line Developments	202

4.3.5.2. Mobile Telephony	206
4.3.5.3. Data Communications	212
4.3.5.4. Internet Service Provision	220
4.3.5.5. Payphones Services	228
4.3.5.6. Telecommunication Contractors	228
4.3.6. Human Resource Development	229
4.3.7. The Role of Donors in ICT Development	236
4.3.8. Concluding the Third phase	241
5. The Case of Tanzania: Assessing ICT Utilisation	245
5.1. Prime Users of ICT	246
5.2. The Role of Internet Cafes	247
5.3. ICT in Governance	250
5.3.1. Approaching E-governance	251
5.3.2. Public Service Reforms as Origins for e-Governance	254
5.3.3. The e-Governance Initiative	257
5.3.4. Supplementary e-Government Approaches	261
5.3.5. Concluding Remarks on e-Government	265
5.4. ICT in Health	267
5.5. ICT in Education	273
5.6. ICT Utilisation in Small and Medium Enterprises (SMEs)	275
5.7. NGO ICT Utilisation	281
5.8. Rural ICT Utilisation	288
5.8.2. Developing Public Internet Access Facilities in Kasulu, Magu, and Sengerema	289
5.8.2.1. Starting Basis of the Public Access Sites	292
5.8.2.2. Connectivity Solutions	293
5.8.2.3. Services and Equipment	294
5.8.2.4. Partners and Funds	296
5.8.3. Users and User Profiles of Rural ICT Utilisation	298
5.8.4. Concluding Rural ICT Utilisation	304
5.9. Prospects of ICT Utilisation in Tanzania	306
6. Conclusion	311
Appendix 1: Selected African ICT Indicators and ICT related Rankings	315
Appendix 2: Map of Africa	318
Appendix 3: Map of Tanzania	319
Appendix 4: List of Interviews	320
7. Bibliography	325