

Content

List of Figures	12
List of Tables	13
Abbreviations	14
Interview Codes	14
1. Introduction	15
2. Organizational Learning from Boundary-spanning Activities	21
Bringing the Environment into Theories of Organizational Learning	21
Linking External Changes with Internal Dynamics in Organizations	22
The Notion of Boundary-spanning Activities	24
Processes of Organizational Learning	28
Stages in Processes of Organizational Learning	31
Weaknesses of Conceptualizing Organizational Learning in Terms of Stages	33
Toward a Contextualized Model of Organizational Learning	34
Knowledge Acquisition through Boundary-spanning Activities	35
Boundary-spanning Activities and the Distribution of Knowledge	37
Boundary-spanning Activities and the Interpretation of Knowledge	39
Boundary-spanning Activities and Organizational Memory	43
Emerging Theoretical Model and Implications for Research	45
3. Research Design, Context, and Methodology	47
Research Design	47
Research Context	49
The IST Program	49
The Management of the IST Program	52
Focal Boundary-spanning Activities	56
Methodology	57

Data Collection.....	57
Analysis of the Data	61
4. Learning from Boundary-spanning Activities with ISTAG.....	63
The Role of ISTAG in the Management of the IST Program	63
The Rise of Organizational Learning Needs	64
Acquiring Knowledge from ISTAG.....	66
Providing a Vision for the IST Program	66
Tailoring Knowledge Provision to Learning Needs	69
The F6 Unit as ISTAG's Advocate	73
Distributing the Knowledge Acquired from ISTAG.....	75
The Linkage between ISTAG Activities and Internal Dynamics of DG INFSO	75
Facilitators of and Barriers to the Distribution of the Acquired Knowledge	80
Interpreting the Knowledge Acquired from ISTAG.....	82
Making Sense of the Acquired Knowledge within the Context of DG INFSO	82
The Impact of Organizational Politics on Knowledge Interpretation.....	84
The Organizational Memory and the Knowledge Acquired from ISTAG	85
Challenges to Established Structures in DG INFSO.....	85
Inertia in DG INFSO	89
Summary of the Main Findings.....	91
5. Learning from Boundary-spanning Activities with ISTC.....	93
The Role of ISTC in Managing the IST Program	93
Prescribed Learning Needs.....	95
Acquiring Knowledge from ISTC.....	96
Gaining Access to Policy-oriented Knowledge	97
Limits to the Knowledge-seeking Behavior of DG INFSO	99
Channeling of Policy-oriented Knowledge into DG INFSO	102
Distribution and Interpretation of the Knowledge Acquired from ISTC	105

Barriers to the Wide Distribution of the Acquired Knowledge in DG INFSO	105
Relevance of the Acquired Knowledge in DG INFSO	109
Organizational Memory and the Knowledge Acquired from ISTC	112
Stability in the Implementation of the IST Program	112
Taking Regulations for Granted	114
Summary of the Main Findings.....	115
6. Discussion of the Empirical Evidence in Light of Theory	117
Variations in Processes of Organizational Learning.....	118
The Rise of Organizational Learning Needs	119
Knowledge Acquisition	121
Distribution.....	125
Interpretation	129
Organizational Memory	132
Concluding Comments	134
Distinctive Qualities of Organizational Learning Triggered by Boundary-spanning Activities	136
Overlapping Stages in Processes of Organizational Learning	138
6. Conclusions.....	141
The Study in Retrospect.....	141
Processes of Learning in the European Commission	142
The Learning Behavior of the European Commission.....	143
Policy Sector Matters for Learning from Boundary-spanning Activities	145
Theoretical Implications of the Impact of Boundary-spanning Activities on Organizational Learning	147
The Formation of Learning through Boundary-spanning Activities	148
Complementarities in the Contextualized Learning Model	150
Organizational Learning and the Institutionalization of Organizational Life	152
References.....	155