

Table of Contents

Preface	7
Søren Dosenrode
Section One
Kaj Munk
Chapter One: Approaching the Questions of Freedom of the Press, Censorship, Self-Censorship, and Press Ethics	11
Søren Dosenrode
Chapter Two: Kaj Munk as a Journalist	21
Arense Lund
Chapter Three: Kaj Munk in and between the World Wars. Official and Political Censorship.	26
Svend Aage Nielsen
Section Two
The Press under Strain
Chapter Four: German Press in the Third Reich	43
Beate Schneider
Chapter Five: Betrayal, Heroism and Everyday Life in the Norwegian Press during the German Occupation of Norway 1940-1945	59
Rune Ottosen
Chapter Six: The Danish Press during the German Occupation: Between Indirect and Direct Control and from Dominant to Negotiated Reading . .	79
Palle Roslyng-Jensen
Chapter Seven: The Press in Eastern Europe during the Cold War	97
Peter Schiwy

Chapter Eight: Walking on a Knife's Edge: Freedom of Press in Turkey ..	103
Yusuf Kanli
Section Three
Religion, Politics and the Press
Chapter Nine: A Battle for Freedom of Speech	113
Anders Raahauge
Chapter Ten: Time to Re-Think Press Freedom?	116
Julian Petley
Chapter Eleven: Comments to Julian Petley's article	121
Barry White
Chapter Twelve: Conflicting Readings: The Cartoon Crisis seen from Pakistan	126
Elisabeth Eide
Chapter Thirteen: The Cold war Triumph of Radio Free Europe	149
Arch Puddington
Section Four
The Press as a Political Instrument
Chapter Fourteen: Democracy and the Media: A Social Contract Dissolved?	173
Jesper Strömbäck
List of Contributors	193
Index	197