

Contents

Preface	vii
Acknowledgments	ix
Abbreviations	xi

Part I: Introduction

1	Returning to the Development Roots of Security Sector Reform Albrecht Schnabel and Vanessa Farr	3
2	The Security-Development Discourse and the Role of SSR as a Development Instrument Albrecht Schnabel	29

Part II: Gender, Security and Development

3	A Bridge Too Far? The Gender Consequences of Linking Security and Development in SSR Discourse and Practice Heidi Hudson	77
4	Learning from Others' Mistakes: Towards Participatory, Gender-sensitive SSR Rahel Kunz and Kristin Valasek	115

Part III: SSR and Development – Regional Perspectives

5	Security Sector Reform, Crime and Regional Development in West Africa Tim Goudsmid, Andrea Mancini, Andrés Vanegas Canosa	147
6	The Failure of Security Sector Reform to Advance Development Objectives in East Timor and the Solomon Islands Derek McDougall	171

Part IV: SSR, DDR and Development

- 7 Pushing Pieces Around the Chessboard or Changing the Game? 201
DDR, SSR and the Security-Development Nexus
Alan Bryden
- 8 Guerrillas, Gangsters and Contractors: Integrating Former 225
Combatants and Its Impact on SSR and Development in Post-conflict Societies
Henri Myrntinen

Part V: Towards 'Developing' SSR Policy?

- 9 Security Sector Reform and State-building: Lessons Learned 251
Paul Jackson
- 10 Opportunities to Support Security and Development: 271
International Organisations' Evolving SSR Approaches
Willem F. van Eekelen
- 11 Lest We Forget? The Centrality of Development Considerations 293
in Internationally Assisted SSR Processes
Ann M. Fitz-Gerald

Part VI: Conclusion

- 12 It Takes Two to Tango: Towards Integrated Development and 321
SSR Assistance
Vanessa Farr, Albrecht Schnabel and Marc Krupanski
- Contributors* 343
Selected Bibliography 349
About DCAF 359