

Table of Contents

Introduction.....
The Georgian-Abkhaz Peace Process and its relevance in international affairs .....	1
Research Question and Premises.....	12
Contributions to practical approaches to mediation .....	14
Contributions to Theory building .....	16
Modus Operandi .....	16
Methodological Considerations.....	21
Theoretical Background: Geopolitical thought and its transformation .....
The origins of Geopolitical Thought .....	25
Geopolitics as a rising phenomenon: 1914-1944.....	27
Geopolitics after World War II: New Beginnings.....	33
Cold War Geopolitics .....	41
The New Global Order – post 1990 Geopolitics .....	47
The modern transformation of Geopolitics.....	62
Critical Geopolitics:
The development of Counter-Geopolitics.....	67
Early Peace Initiatives and the Road to War .....
Introduction.....	75
1. The relations of Georgians and Abkhaz: A brief historical background .....	77
2. Gamsakhurdia: Early attempts for keeping the peace.....	87
3. The Interim Government: Missed Opportunities for Peace .....	92
4. Of Russians and Dagomys .....	98
5. Information flows amidst crisis.....	102
6. A State failing on the Road to War.....	105
Closing Remarks .....	111

I.

The First Phase of the Georgian-Abkhaz Peace Process: 1992-1996.....
Georgian Diplomacy: A Russian-centric approach to the new market for mediation .....	114
The Introduction of Mediators: A choice based on interests .....	116
State Centrism in Mediation Processes.....	125

II.

The Second Phase of the Georgian-Abkhaz Peace Process: 1996-1998.....
Russian Domination and an Asymmetric Mediation.....	142
Mediation by way of Asymmetries and Coercion .....	143
Russian Mediation and a new geopolitical Focus on its "Near Abroad" .....	147
Head to Head: High level Attempts to strengthen Georgian-Abkhaz initiatives.....	150

III.

The Third Phase of the Georgian-Abkhaz Peace Process: 1999-2003 .....
Introduction.....	155
Settling the Status Issue .....	156
Political Developments .....	163
Second Track Initiatives.....	172

IV.

The Fourth Phase of the Georgian-Abkhaz Peace Process: 2003-2004.....
Introduction.....	180
New beginnings – New uncertainties.....	181
Mikhail Saakashvili: Re-positioning Georgia.....	188
The War of Words .....	191
The Domestic Arena .....	198
Elections in Abkhazia – A turning point?	203
Beyond Elections in Abkhazia: Renewed hope for Non-Resumption of Hostilities .....	207

V.

The Fifth Phase of the Georgian-Abkhaz Peace Process: 2005-2007 .....
Introduction.....	210
New Momentum .....	212
The First Steps on the Path to War.....	224

VI.

The Final Phase of the Georgian-Abkhaz Peace Process .....

Introduction..... 232

    Nearing the end of a long and winding road..... 233

    The fall of the White Horse: Domestic turmoil in Georgia..... 242

        A New Option: War ..... 247

VII.

No Knight in Shining Armour: The EU and the Georgian-Abkhaz Peace Process .....

Introduction..... 255

    The EU as foreign policy actor..... 257

    Early EU initiatives with respect to Georgia..... 263

        Political Dialogue cum Interests..... 264

            The EU Special Representative to the South Caucasus ..... 266

            European Neighbourhood Policy ..... 268

    Normative Power with global ambitions: A Contradiction in Terms?..... 271

        The EU in Georgia: From Newcomer to Global Actor..... 279

            Constraints for the EU ..... 285

            Limits to an autonomous EU foreign policy in Georgia..... 288

Conclusion

1. A flawed process.....

    The absence of a harmonized peace process ..... 292

    Competing for Mediation ..... 293

    Second Track Diplomacy – A process within the process..... 296

2. Parties to the conflict unprepared for compromise .....

3. A fading ability to compromise .....

Bibliography